When the coronavirus pandemic swept through the UK in March 2020 the vast majority of offices were forced to close, leaving City Pantry with far fewer orders than we were used to.

After the initial shock wore off and we witnessed the widespread effects of the crisis on small businesses, key workers, and vulnerable communities around the country, we knew we had to do something to help.

That's why we launched the #FeedYourCommunity initiative

We teamed up with restaurant and delivery partners as well as corporate customers to prepare and distribute food to key workers and vulnerable communities most affected by the pandemic.

To cook hot, fresh food for those who need it most has been a privilege and has reaffirmed to us why we do what we do. It has also been a great way for us, as a team, to keep busy and stay positive.
- Aadit, Atcha

Collaboration is key! On International Nurses Day we delivered over 3,000 meals to NHS nurses in five hospitals in partnership with Hospitality for Heroes and over Easter, Dominique Ansel Bakery baked and donated 500 hot cross buns to the cause.

Albrighton Community Fridge provides food for between 2000 to 2500 people each week, including those shielding and self-isolating, as well as those who can't afford food due to changes in their circumstances. The food that City Pantry has provided has been a huge lift for them.
- Steve, Albrighton Community Centre

The impact we've been able to have across care homes, community centres, and front-line institutions has been astounding. I'm proud of the team and their efforts to deliver so many meals and provide logistics solutions to our charity partners. The energy our staff, our vendor-partners, and our customers, have been fantastic.
- Mike Strange, City Pantry

At City Pantry, we know the impact that good food has on people's lives, so that's why we're proud to have helped feed key workers and vulnerable communities during the COVID-19 crisis through our #FeedYourCommunity project.

We're still delivering food to key workers and vulnerable communities around London. If you'd like to donate, prepare, or receive meals, please get in touch by emailing foodguru@citypantry.com.
